A Prayer of Dedication 2 Chronicles 6:12-21

Aim and Application of the Lesson

The lesson examines the setting, substance, and the application in Solomon's Prayer of Dedication. The study's aim is to recognize that prayer is a unique activity in which we can engage. The study's application is to make our daily lives practically one continuous prayer.

Lesson Introduction and Background

It is often said that public prayers should not be used as a vehicle for preaching to others. This is true if the preaching consists of voicing pet peeves or riding personal hobbyhorses. But the Bible is filled with public prayers that proclaim truth. Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple is no exception. The prayer, which runs from 2 Chronicles 6:14 to the end of the chapter (vs. 42), is largely a plea for forgiveness for anticipated future sins on the part of God's people and for deliverance from the variety of afflictions those sins would bring (vss. 21-42), Solomon knew his people's propensity for falling away from devotion to the God who loved and provided for them. Ironically, he would be one of the first to do so later in life. But at this moment, the words he spoke were altogether true and unblemished. Although all the pleas that Solomon voiced point indispensably to God's holiness, grace, and mercy, they are founded upon basic truths uttered at the beginning of the prayer, The text contains the groundwork that Solomon laid in proclaiming the kind of God that Israel had come together at the temple to worship. The first thing to be emphasized about God was His utter incomparability. "There is no God like thee." The Old Testament makes this point over and over (Exod. 15:11; Deut. 4:35; 2 Sam. 7:22; Ps. 86:8; Isa. 40:25; 46:9, to cite just a few). It was one of the basic truths Israel needed to learn and be reminded of repeatedly. The Lord's incomparability has no bounds. There is none like Him "in the heaven, nor in the earth." Even the most hard-bitten pagan would not have made such a claim for any of the gods he bowed down to. It is human nature to try to make God something less than He is and more like familiar things, but this tendency must be resisted at all costs. God is not just another part of creation; He is totally above it and unique. But this incomparable God also relates to people personally. He keeps His "covenants"; that is, He is faithful to keep His promises. He is not like the pagan gods, who say one thing and do another. He does not keep His word only at convenience, as so many people do. God's character is also marked by mercy. Pagan gods could be capricious and cruel, but God shows mercy and kindness in His dealings with His people, "thy servants, that walk before thee with all their hearts." We might at first think that such people do not need mercy, but no one who walks closely with God would ever be so proud as to think God's mercy and grace were not needed every moment. And it is only by God's mercy that we are enabled to walk before Him in the first place. Unlike Solomon and the Israelites, we do not have a temple to dedicate to the Lord. If we are Christ's and have the Holy Spirit, we are God's temple, and we can dedicate our lives to Him every day. We can do this fully confident that He is a faithful God who will keep every promise He has made to us.
